Northwich man convicted of abusing former partners

A Northwich man who led police on a high-speed pursuit across Winsford has been jailed after he was found guilty of controlling, assaulting and abusing two women.

Jason Lamb was convicted of two counts controlling and coercive behaviour, three counts of intentional strangulation, and one count of intentional suffocation following a trial at Chester Crown Court which concluded on Tuesday 17 March.

The 27-year-old of Celandine Court, Lostock Gralam, Northwich, was also convicted of criminal damage and animal cruelty, dangerous driving, driving while disqualified, riving without insurance and possession of a weapon.

Lamb reappeared at Chester on Wednesday 18 March where he was sentenced to seven and a half years in prison.

The court heard evidence from Lamb's two former partners who described how they were subject to a relentless campaign of abuse from Lamb, who was controlling and jealous.

The women, who were in relationships with Lamb between February 2023 and August 2025, stated that Lamb regularly controlled who they were allowed to see and speak to, prevented the women from leaving their homes and often accused them of cheating.

One of his victims was also forced to quit her job, as Lamb was unhappy with who she was working with. While one of the women described how he had attempted to strangle her on multiple occasions and also attempted to suffocate her.

After suffering a catalogue of abuse, both women reported Lamb to Cheshire Police, and he was subsequently arrested and charged with multiple offences.

He appeared at Warrington Magistrates' Court on 27 August 2025, where the judge released him on conditional bail.

Following his release, a further incident was reported by one of the victims and a police manhunt was launched for his arrest.

On 6 September 2025, officers on patrol in Winsford spotted a black Audi registered to Lamb driving on High Street. Officers pursued the vehicle as it travelled across the town and through Whitegate, reaching speeds of up to 60mph in a residential area, contravening red lights and dangerously overtaking vehicles.

However, the pursuit was later abandoned after Lamb drove onto a grass verge in Wharton, close to a number of children who were playing on a field.

Despite losing sight of the car, officers continued the hunt for Lamb, and his car was subsequently found abandoned on Severn Walk. Additional officers attended the scene, along with the police helicopter, and Lamb was quickly located on Crook Lane where he was arrested.

Following the guilty verdict, Detective Constable Adam Worth, of Northwich CID said:

“Firstly, I would like to commend the victims for bravely speaking to police about what happened to them. Both women were subjected to a relentless campaign of abuse from Lamb which left both physically and mentally scarred.

“Through his controlling and coercive behaviour, Lamb was able to control everything both women did, isolating them from their friends and family, and leaving them both trapped with nowhere to turn.

“Thankfully, as a result of the support that they received from their families and the team here at Northwich, both women have finally been able to break free from Lamb.

“While they will never be able to forget what happened to them, I hope that the conclusion of this case will help them to move forward and start to rebuild their lives.”

Man jailed for drug dealing in Ellesmere Port

During a search of the address a small amount of cannabis was located.

He was later charged with the offences.

PC Adam Critchley said:

Over 1000 stop checks completed and nearly 30 arrested following immigration and night-time economy operation

Over 220 officers from across the Constabulary have taken part in a month-long organised immigration crime and night-time economy safety operation.

Between Friday 13 February and Sunday 15 March, officers from Cheshire Police's Foreign National Offender Team, with assistance from Home Office Immigration, carried out 24 proactive deployments across the county.

The purpose of the operation, conducted in town centres and night-time economy settings, was to complete immigration checks on delivery drivers, ensuring they were legally allowed to work in the UK and were not being exploited under modern slavery offences.

In line with the Constabulary's ongoing priorities, officers also focused on tackling violence against women and girls.

Officers were further supported by local authority CCTV operators, who monitored areas in real time, enabling the prevention of crime and rapid response to any emerging incidents.

The efforts of the team resulted in 600 people and 483 vehicles being stopped by officers.

These stops led to 27 arrests, 11 of which were directly linked to immigration offences and illegal working.

Other outcomes from the operation included:

- 150 immigration status checks completed with the National Command and Control Unit
- 80 traffic reports issued
- 38 stop searches conducted
- 28 vehicles seized (including cars and e-bikes)

During the deployment on 21 February, a 16-year-old boy was found drinking at a commercial premises in Crewe and was subsequently taken home by officers. Trading Standards have since been contacted regarding a review of the premises' licensing.

On the same evening, a 62-year-old man from Shrewsbury was arrested by Operation Ascertain officers, who were first on the scene at Chester Railway Station responding to reports of a sexual assault by touching. He was also arrested on suspicion of aggravated public order and Section 39 assault. British Transport Police are progressing the investigation.

On 15 March, officers arrested a 29-year-old man from the Ashton-in-Makerfield area of Wigan on suspicion of possession of cannabis. He has since been issued with a community resolution.

Operational lead Detective Sergeant Lauren Henthorn said:

“Conducting over 1,000 individual stops is no small feat, and these results were only possible due to the combined efforts of the officers deployed across the county and the support of our partner organisations. I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone involved for helping us achieve such outcomes.

“The work carried out under Operation Ascertain forms just one part of our wider ongoing efforts to keep residents across Cheshire safe and ensure that those working within our towns are doing so legally and safely, without being exploited for free labour.

“We often find that those involved in the exploitation of vulnerable people are also linked to other forms of criminality, including wide-scale drug and human trafficking offences. This is why we remain committed to doing all we can to identify those responsible.

“I also hope these results provide reassurance to residents county-wide that officers are out in their communities and night-time economy settings, working proactively to ensure everyone can enjoy themselves without fear of having their night disrupted or ruined by those who do not know how to behave.”

Detective Chief Inspector Danielle Knox, of the Force Intelligence Bureau, added:

“Operation Ascertain shines a spotlight on the work our officers do every single day of the year to protect and safeguard vulnerable people in Cheshire.

“In line with Cheshire Constabulary’s core principles, a key focus of this operation was ensuring that women, girls, and everyone enjoying our night-time economy venues across the county can do so without risk of harm.

“While this operation represents just a snapshot of a month of deployments, this is very much business as usual for us, and we will always do everything we can to keep our residents safe.”

Anyone with information relating to child abuse or exploitation, or who has concerns about someone’s safety, should contact Cheshire Constabulary on 101 or report online via the force website.

Information can also be provided anonymously through Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111.

Warrington residents reminded to remain vigilant following reports of bike thefts

Officers in Warrington are reminding residents to take the proper precautions when securing their bikes following several reports of thefts across the town.

In recent days, officers have received multiple reports of stolen bikes, with a significant number occurring in the Orford area.

Enquiries into the incidents remain ongoing, but officers are urging residents to take additional steps to protect their property and reduce the likelihood of falling victim to theft.

How to keep your bike safe:

- Always secure your bike with an appropriate lock when it is not in use.
- When storing your bike at home, keep it in a secure location.
- Consider installing a video doorbell or security camera, and stay alert to any unusual markings or signs around your property.
- Use a tracking device and display labels on your bike or scooter indicating that a tracker is fitted.
- Get your bike security marked.

Neighbourhood Sergeant Anna Bell, of Warrington Local Policing Unit, said:

“There are a number of simple precautions you can take to prevent your bike from falling into the hands of opportunistic thieves. Taking an extra 30 seconds to ensure you’ve properly secured your bike with a reliable lock can make a real difference.

“Keeping your bike out of sight at home may seem obvious, but storing it safely in a shed, garage, or inside your home provides an extra layer of protection.

“Our officers regularly host free community bike-marking events. Having your bike clearly marked and identifiable can significantly deter thieves and helps us return it to you if it is recovered.

“We also encourage anyone with a bike to make use of security measures such as the Bike Register — the UK’s national bike-marking and registration scheme, which aims to reduce cycle theft, identify stolen bikes, and return recovered ones to their rightful owners.

“If your bike or scooter is stolen, please report the crime as soon as you notice it is missing. Provide the police with the frame number, registration database details, photographs, and any other key information, and update the status on whichever cycle database you’ve registered with.

“The sooner officers know, the sooner we can act.”

Congleton man sentenced for theft after repeatedly stealing from the same store

A Congleton man has been sentenced following a number of thefts from a shop in the town.

Tobias Bennet, 25, appeared at Crewe Magistrates Court on 10 March to be sentenced after pleading guilty to theft from a shop.

He was given a community order, electronically tagged and required to undertake drug rehabilitation. He was also ordered to pay compensation for the stolen goods.

Bennett stole washing products from Home Bargains to the value of £100 on 4 January, £50 worth of washing products on 7 February, £47 worth of cleaning products from Home Bargains on 22 February and £77.92 worth of cleaning products from Home Bargains on 21 February.

Sgt Vicky Welch said:

“Some people wrongly think that stealing from shops is a low-level crime, but the reality is that the impact that theft has on businesses and their staff is so much more than this.

“Businesses lose stock and money, and staff worry about having to confront a potential shoplifter, never quite knowing whether the next person who comes through the door is going to try to take stock and potentially assault them in the process.

“No one should have to worry about their safety when they are just doing their job. That’s why we continue to work with businesses to help prevent crime and do everything we can to put thieves before the courts for their crimes.”

Wanted man arrested following collaborative response

A wanted man who fled from officers into a canal has been arrested following a coordinated response between the Constabulary's Drone Unit and on-the-ground Beat teams.

YouTube content

On Sunday 15 March, officers in Runcorn were conducting enquiries to locate a 21-year-old man.

Drone teams, who had been deployed earlier to the area, identified the man after he was picked up in a van and liaised with patrols on the ground who were carrying out address checks in order to intercept the vehicle.

When officers stopped the van, the man fled on foot before jumping into a nearby canal.

However, he remained clearly visible to drone pilots and was subsequently arrested on suspicion of breaching court bail and escaping lawful custody.

He has since been released on conditional bail.

Northern Response Inspector Nick Bamber said:

“This is an excellent example of Cheshire Police doing what we do best: working together to bring in those who think they are above the law.

“The coordinated use of local patrols, specialist units and drone technology resulted in the safe arrest of a suspect who was determined to avoid capture. I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone involved for their swift and professional response.

“Today’s result goes to show that we remain committed in our pursuit of wanted and outstanding offenders and, regardless of whether they try to escape us on dry land or in water, we will leave no stone unturned to bring them into custody.”

Man jailed for over two years for drug supply offences

A man has been jailed for drug-related offences in Congleton.

Ben Schofield, of High Bent Avenue, Cheadle Hulme, Cheadle, was sentenced to 28 months at Manchester Minshull Street Crown Court on Thursday 12 March.

The 37-year-old had previously admitted being concerned in the supply of class A and B drugs and possession of a weapon.

On 3 September 2024, Schofield was arrested in relation to an unrelated matter, and his phone was seized by officers as part of an investigation.

Analysis of the phone later revealed messages indicating that he was involved in the supply of class A and B drugs in the Congleton area.

On 26 January 2025 officers attended Schofield’s address to arrest him, and a snap bag of white powder residue and a pink tablet was found in his pocket.

His rucksack was then searched which contained more than 100 ecstasy tablets, snap bags of cannabis, drugs paraphernalia and an electrical device, later identified as an electronic stun device.

The ecstasy tablets were valued at between £1,025 and £2,050 and the cannabis at between £210 and £335.

PC Boase said:

“Not only did Schofield have a substantial quantity of illegal drugs in his possession, but he also had a dangerous weapon which could have caused serious harm to someone.

“I welcome the custodial sentence handed to Schofield but let this be a warning, our fight against illegal drugs is never over and we continue to tackle this issue head-on.

“If you have any information about drug-related activity in your community, please contact us on 101 or through our website.”

Constabulary continues to tackle retail crime with facial recognition technology

Cheshire Constabulary is continuing to tackle retail crime by increasing the use of retrospective facial recognition technology to identify and prosecute shoplifters across the county.

The news coincides with the Constabulary supporting the national awareness week for Business Crime Reduction Partnerships, commencing on Monday 16 March.

During the week, officers will be out across the force tackling a range of retail crime, while engaging with local businesses and members of the public under Operation Watchmaker.

As part of this, officers will be encouraging retailers, security staff and business partners to join its ‘Report and Support’ campaign.

This involves retailers not only reporting incidents of shoplifting and other crime, but then also supporting the police investigation by ensuring images and videos of suspects or other visual evidence - captured on CCTV or security staff’s body worn cameras - are submitted to police.

Images or videos which show suspects’ faces enable officers to use retrospective facial recognition technology to help identify those involved, increasing the chances of those responsible being prosecuted.

Chief Inspector Dan Reynolds said:

“The impact of retail crime cannot be underestimated and this national week of action from the National Association of Business Crime Partnerships is a testament to our collective ongoing efforts to tackle this issue head-on.

“Business Crime Reduction Partnerships unite the local business community with police and local authorities to help prevent anti-social behaviour, shoplifting, and other retail-related crime.

“By asking retailers and partners to ‘Report and Support’ we can better utilise facial recognition technology which is a powerful investigative tool which helps us quickly identify suspects and stop repeat offending.

“Facial recognition is already used frequently across the force to identify suspects involved in a range of offences. The ‘Report and Support’ campaign aims to directly appeal to the business community to ensure visual evidence is submitted in a timely manner so we can make the most of what this technology has to offer.

“Police will be out across the week as part of Operation Watchmaker to raise awareness of the impact of retail crime, and I would urge anyone with any concerns to speak to an officer.”

Chief Inspector Darren Griffiths added:

“Facial recognition technology is the latest capability provided to officers to improve our response in achieving justice more efficiently and making the county a hostile place for criminals to operate.

“This technology allows us to tackle business crime head on, help those in need in our community, and it is just one of the many ways in which we are arming ourselves to target known offenders who are intent on committing crime in Cheshire.”

You can report retail crime to Cheshire Police by calling 101 or 999 in an emergency, or by reporting it via the Cheshire Police website.
